

DON'T FRET. FLUFF!

Feather wrapped furniture cushions require regular maintenance to keep up with their comfort and beauty. Cushions will be more fluffy and full when you first receive them. Overtime, feather cushions will start to flatten, loosen and wrinkle. These are common and standard characteristics of feather styles. Cushions hold air which makes them soft and gives them their fullness. Overtime, sitting or leaning on feather wrapped cushions causes the feathers to clump together and flatten.

Feather wrapped seat and back cushions are designed with multiple channels. All feather seat cushions will develop an impression as you start to use your furniture. There are air pockets in the feather channels that compress when furniture is used causing impressions in the cushions, giving an untidy and relaxed appearance. This is a completely normal characteristic of all feather seat cushions and is not a defect with the feather or foam insert.

RECOMMENDED REGULAR MAINTENANCE

Frequently fluff your seat and back cushions to retain their shape. Hit the feather with your hands (or a small bat) on a flat surface to evenly distribute the feather throughout the channels of the cushions. Fluffing the cushion adds air and breaks apart the fill within the channels. Remember to rotate and flip your cushions regularly.
